CROSSFIELD—Early Wednesday morning while Dong Robinson, Earl Richardson and their son, Earl Richardson and their wives were returning from a dinner party, they noticed a fire in the north end of town and drove in from the highway to see if the alert had been sounded.

Apparently the town was sleeping, but minutes later through the cuick work of Doug Robinson, who had wakened the telephone operator and Mis. Richardson who operator and Mrs. Richardson who had access to her parent's phone, the fire siren was sounded and in record time the brigade was at the scene of the fire in the old Kemzier lot.

Apparently an over heated brooder stove had started the blaze and the chicken house was of chickens and turkeys. The brigade s'opped, the fire in short order and kent it from spreading.

To the amazement of all a mother turkey sat on her nest near the door throughout the com-motion and fire, still alive and honeful.

"In general," the E of M summarizes, "the census figures present a picture of a population at a pace that is imperceptible in a short period but prevasive over the longer run, and in ways that are sometimes predictable and sometimes not."

"There are, however, some basic features inherent in the population structure as it now exists which can be expected to exert ascertainable economic pressures in the years ahead." "The past decade has seen a resumption in the tendency for the population, as it grows, to shift from the farm to the city—a longterm tendency which had been interrupted during the '30's." The country's urban population grew by 35 per cent between 1941 and 1951, while the farm population increased by only seven per cent. "Even more dramatic than this urbanization," the bank states, "was the 'suburbanization' movement within the matropolitan "was the 'suburbanization' move-ment within the metropolitan areas." How many products

From eggs, a hen can expect just one product-chicks. But from crude oil, Imperial refines 679 different products, ranging from weed killers to heavy asphalts. And that is not all-crude oil also supplies petroleum gases and other raw materials for plastics and synthetic rubber.

do we get from crude oil?

Oil plays a large and growing part in our everyday living. How many of these questions about it can you answer?

Oil supplies are vital to defence. The gasoline required to move one armoured division 100 miles would run your car for 10 years? 95 years? The average weekly pay cheque of Canadians in 1939 would buy 84 gallons of gasoline. How many gallons will today's cheque buy 79? 135? 93?

Scientists believe oil was formed from the remains of tiny sea creatures which lived millions of years ago. Would you say oil is found in rock? pools?

Since 1947, oil companies have spent $775 millions on exploration and development in Alberta. In that time the gross value of all oil produced has been $450 millions? $1,350 millions?

It takes many millions of dollars in plant and equipment to provide high-quality oil products when and where you need them. How much does this amount to per Imperial employee $16,597? . $30,715? The average family car could be operated for 350 years on the gasoline needed to move an armoured division 100 miles.

Even though gasoline road taxes are higher in all provinces, today's average pay cheque will buy 135 gallons.

Oil is usually found far underground in the tiny pores of rock such as limestone or sand-. The word petroleum is derived from the Latin "petra" and "oleum"-rock oil.

Not quite $450 millions. Oil companies have received much less than this, of course, because from it must be paid field operating expenses, royalties, taxes and other charges.

Imperial's investment in plant and equipment is $30,715 for each of its 13,500 employees, and it is still rising.

The Prime Minister

Many Canadians know more about the President of the United States than they do President of the United States than they do of their own Prime Minister. Here are a few interesting facts. Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent was born on February 1st, 1882, at Compton, Quebec. His father was a French-Canadian and Mismother was Mary Broderick, an Irish-Canadian. As a child he talked English to his mother and French to his father. He became Prime Minister In 1948.

é Prime Minister In 1948. Mr. Menzies, the Australian P.M., said before his last election that he was not "born in the purple." Mr. St. Laurent was not either but both have seen a good deal of it in recent years. They have much in common. The parents in both cases were small-town storekeepers. Both youths turned to law and both graduated from universities in their own countries. Mr. St. Laurent refused a Rhodes Scholarship to continue his law studies, and Mr. Menzies was called to the bar at the age of 23. Both were brilliant students and sucof 23. Both were brilliant students and successful lawyers. Both pleaded cases before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

When they reached the prime-minister-ship in their respective countries, each appointed a native-born subject of the Queen to be Governor-General of the country of their birth.

Mr. Menzies is 13 years younger than

Mr. hoth are in ex-Canada's Prime Minister, but both are in excellent health. Mr. Menzies has been in politics longer than has Mr. St. Laurent and is probably more of a campaigner, although less exact as a lawyer.

These men would, materially, have been much better off if they had never entered politics, but each has made a contribution to the general welfare that cannot be measured in dollars.

Good News On Spinach

Many a younster, who has no particular liking for spinach, will welcome the news from London which reveals that two medical researchers have concluded that spinach may imperil the health of youngsters when eaten regularly. Doctors Joan E. Bamji and N. S. Bamji, of London, have advanced the theory that the intense dislike of spinach, demonstrated by many children, is only nature's way of protecting them from its harmful effects.

The theory is that an acid in spinach interferes with the body's absorption of calcium, needed in all young bodies to build strong bones and teeth, and thus the harm from spinach exceeds the good it might do. In addition, the same acid might cause a condition which damages the kidneys, according to the theory.

We have long suspected that, in some cases at least, an intense dislike for certain foods might have some physiological connectinn. There is also, we are told, a psychological factor which comes into the picture with many foods, although we are not speakwith many foods, although we are not speaking of that now.

Certainly, it would be encouraging if there is some basis for an intense dislike of foods, other than psychological. Of course, if this theory is carried to the extreme, and children are allowed to eat what they please, the result might be worse than the mistakes likely to be made in properly planning diets. Thus, we do not advise parents to allow children to eat what they want to eat.

We have also suspected secretly, at times, that there is something in the craving for a specific food, which the human body sometimes develops. This seems to be a pretty good theory, except when the craving is for ice-cream, candy or cake.

Men Of Valor

This generation has reason to glory in the latent This generation has reason to glory in the latent capacities of human nature. Consider courage. We now know that bravery is one of the most common of virtues. A veritable library would be required to contain the record of heroism in battle, gallantry under fire, fortitude in foxholes, sacrificial devotion to comrades, laying down of life for a friend, rendering full measure of devotion to the cause of freedom. Hats off to human nature!

Of Many Things

"I had all the knowledge I really needed when I was seventeen, but unfortunately I didn't realize a businessman said the other day. "What do you mean, you didn't realize it?" I

"Well", he told me, "here's an example, her used to say, 'Always get down to used to say, 'Always get down to brass When we youngsters talked in circles or father us tacks'. expounded theories, he'd bring us to earth and make us spell out what we meant in terms of real people, real places, and real things. He called it getting down to brass tacks. I'd have saved myself a lot of business worry and grief if I'd applied that practice to some of the half-baked ideas sold to Today, in business meetings, I insist that y ideas get tied to real things or get thrown out the window. But it took me a long time to learn that lesson."

He gave other examples but I didn't need them. I have plenty of my own. I guess we all have. Our parents or teachers told us most of the sidewalk virtues long ago, but we only half listened.

In my final year at school I had a professor who would walk into class and say, "Here's your lesson in composition: describe the smell of hot, buttered toast. When you finish that, write out the difference between a waltz and a fox trot."

We thought he was crazy. The smell of hot buttered toast was—well, now, it was—why, it was like the smell of hot, buttered toast!

But of course that didn't satisfy him. He wanted you to get down to brass tacks. In everything. If you said, "It was a beautiful autumn day," he wanted to know why you thought so. What did the sky look like? What colors could you see in the trees? What kind of trees? Maple, oak, hemthe trees? What kind of trees? Maple, oak, nem-lock? He kept insisting that you put real names to real things. If you talked about a road you traveled he wanted to know if it was gravel or concrete, rough or smooth. He was a great man for getting down to brass tacks.

Maybe that teacher was odd. But I'll say this for him—boys and girls who sat in his class never get taken in by gobbledygook. Fancy phrases like "Production for use and not for profit" don't get by them. They want to know what production. Aren't the goods produced today being used? What is profit? Isn't it the opposite of loss? How do you get this production you talk about? Will the producer be able to use it or does he give it away? Such questions embarrass political gracks. producer be able to use it or does he give it away? Such questions embarrass political quacks. They don't want to be nailed to real things; they don't want to recognize the fact that to produce milk, for example, you must raise more cows and milk 'em. That's too hard! They prefer to have you think they can wave a wand at Ottawa or spout a theory on the platform and milk will start to flow like magic.

Sometimes when I hear political speeches on the on, get down to brass tacks!" Politicians love the radio, because you can't look too closely at what radio, because you can't look too closely at what they say. They hate the press because newspaper writers are trained to look for facts and ask questions. When words and wind are trimmed from a lot of speeches not much remains.

It might be good for us to think back to the isdom of parents and teachers once in awhile. e didn't always soak it up. It is not too late start. Any time is a good time to get down to ass tacket.

On Dumb Women

Viscountess Astor, Virginia-born lady, who often makes the headlines with her quips, recently spoke out on women, 1953-version. The first woman to sit in the British Parliament blasted her own sex in a speech before an organization which has a speech before an organization which has long pressed for women's rights.

Viscountess Astor says: "Women to-day take everything for granted," and that they "have a dumbness about them because they do not know why we got the vote." also said that women seem to get dumber and dumber.

Lady Astor is obviously bitter at the members of her own sex, all the reasons for which we do not pretend to know. However, it seems to us that she is off the track on the issue of women's mentality. Instead of getting dumber and dumber, all the evidence seems to indicate that women are making progress in every major field and that they are more capable and more intelligent than ever before.

And as for dumbness—because they do not know why they got the vote—that charge is a legitimate one concerning many members of the enposite say. of the opposite sex. So we cannot agree with Lady Astor, especially when she says glamorous women make her sick.

Obvious, some fellow members of her own sex have ruffled the feathers of the British M.P.

FOR UNION NOW

Canada and the U.S.A. should be one big country. I have advocated this brotherly union for the last 25 years among all the people I know. Let's have no more of this stupid, imaginary separation line. Canadians should have sense enough to let go of their infantile attachments. e Wshould have the attachments, e Wshould have the vision to admit that we cannot do anything really big without the U.S.A.

FOR KINDER CRITICS

Why do so many critics of the theatre and motion pictures do their utmost to drive actors, producers, directors and writers out of their field by their vicious criticism? These critics seem to presume that their personal views are shared by everyone on earth. Why don't they merely advise the public that they didn't find the show enjoyable, together with their recent? their reasons?

CALL OF THE RURAL By KENNETH H. HUTCHINGS, Gibbons

You can have your city jammed with homes And your crowded hard top street, But give me a quiet rural place And the earth beneath my feet—Surrounded by miles of woods and fields that becken strong to me, and blanketed with waving grain As far as the eye can see.

You can have your hemmed in urban life With a built in ontdoor view. Where you get a look at the animal world By a trip to the local zoo. But give me a life in the great outside Where animals have no cage. A healthy life in the quiet outside Where outdoor life's the rage.

You can have your smoke fogged city place
Where a streamlined golfing green
Is a man-med imitation
Of the missing outdoor scene.

MISS SHI ed. I had even accepted a lovely cedar chest last year for my birth-day. We broke up because I didn't like him any more. I just grew tired of him.

LETTER TO LOUISA

Now I have been going very steady with the boy who was our class president in High School. I've really fallen in love with him and he with me. Everything is goand he with me. Everything is going fine except for my mother. She iurt keeps harping about B, how lonesome he must be, how I've broken his heart, how I've sinned and everything like that. But I think I'm old enough to know and why should I waste any more time with E when I don't care for him the least little way? I'm very happy with Tom.

hanpy with Tom.
I wish I could make my mother understand. We don't get along at all. I've never been close to her, not like other girls. We fuss and argue or fight, then she says how I hurt her. Well she does me too. She even said I never need he save she certainly won't like him. All she ever talks about is B. and I simply can't stand that.

What am I going to do and how am I going to make mother un-derstand? I can't go on like this when I am not welcomed at my futher's house, Please write me.

Answer—
Breaking an engagement with a man one has ceased to love is certainly not a sin. In fast, a greater wrong would be done by going on, and marrying the man just because one felt a sense of duty. You are both fortunate to have found out that you were not really in love before you were married. married.

Tom and I wonder if you went about breaking your engagement with B in the proper way. Did you try to keep from burting him and make the break as easy as possible?

It sounds a bit callous to say that you con't care for him in the least li tle way. I can see why you have discovered that you do not love him enough to marry him but why should that make you dislike a man you once thought enough of to consider as a husband?

Your mother, perhaps, thinks that you are just infatuated with T. but even if that were the case, and you were not truly in love, her nagging does more harm than good to B's cause.

"ITS FUN TO DRAW"

Carvel School Class Shows Surprising Proficiency In Art; Students' Drawings Consistently Win Places In Exhibitions

In a little one-room schoolhouse 32 miles west of Edmonton, 27 pupils, ranging in age from six to 16, are surprising the Department of Education with the high quality of their art work.

second of more

Their artistic abilities became evident through the School Broadcast series, "It's Fun to Draw,' in which students listen to a playlet or poem, then express their impressions in a picture. The pupils of Manly School at Carvel, under the instruction of Mrs. M. E. Gadd, have displayed enthusiastic imagination and a surprising amount of feeling for action and rhythm of movement. Their work is representative of the finest that has been produced in the three prairie provinces participating in the program.

It's Fun to Draw" is broadcast on alternate Wednesday afternoons from October to April. Students listen to a dramatization of a story or the narration of a poem, and then, on large sheets of drawing paper, they depict the parts of the story which appeal to their imaginations. While they draw, appropriate music is played to stimulate the imagination. The students find that music relaxes them and inspires their creative abilities. The rhythm indicates the action and mood to be represented in the picture.

Some of the subjects offered in this year's series included a Hallowe'en ghost story, the fairy tale of Hansel and Gretel, an account of Eskimo life, the poem "The Pied Piper of Hamelin" and an adventure trip about life on Mars. To all of these, the pupils of Manly School responded with vivid representations. Their drawings were full of action and color. Their figures were life-like and surroundings were real.

At periodic intervals during the year, travelling exhibits are made up from drawings submitted by the various schools. The exhibits are loaned to classrooms throughout the Province, so that students may view the work done by other Alberta girls and boys. Each child whose picture is selected for exhibition receives an Honor Roll Card bearing his name and the number of times his work has been of exhibition quality.

Manly School students are consistent exhibitors. In current exhibits is a monochromatic drawing of an Eskimo sled team. This was done by Rose Oshvalda, 13 years of age, and shows an S-shaped string of sled dogs, driven by an Eskimo. The picture, finished in muted shades of grey, is so realistic the dogs seem to be alive. Hockey and skiing pictures, drawn as a result of a winter sports story, embody the sharp edge of the winter air, the fast action of skater and skier, and the keen enjoyment of the participants.

The art work of these pupils from grade one to nine is proof of the merit of the broadcasts. "It's Fun to Draw," which completed its third consecutive broadcast year over five Alberta radio stations on April 15, exercises the imagination of its listeners, inspires clear, creative thinking and an ability to express one's experiences with confidence.

Waskatenau To Join A.T.A. SUB-LOCAL FESTIVAL VERY HIGHLY COMMENDED

VILNA—The A.T.A. sub-local festival was held at Vilna on Friday, May 22. Most of the program consisted of class items and represented over 30 schools. There was a variety of approximately 57 items, which included plays, choruses, choral speeches, recitations and dances.

The day's non-competitive program was epened at nine o'clock at the Grand Hall with the high school chorus singing "O Canada." From eleven o'clock to four-thirty the program continued at Vilna Star Theatre where the stage background was decorated with red, white and blue ribbons and a portrait of Queen Elizabeth II. Mr. Necyk was the master of ceremonies.

After the program came to an end there were four commentators, who had watched the items for merit and defects all day, to give their impressions of the program. Dr. Eriksson of the faculty of Physical Education from the University of Alberta, said that the pupils and teachers should be highly commended on their work. The main point was that to make a stage act more effective there is a necessity for a smile. Mr. Purvis, superintendent of Lamont School Division, stress-

Social Credit Hopes To Win Majority Seats In British Columbia Election

VICTORIA, B.C.—British Columbia voters will go to the polls on June 9 in their third provincial election in four years but it is still a toss-up whether the election will bring poll-

With the election campaign turn-ing into the home stretch, however, solid competition has emerged from what were for a time three copfused and worried groups—the Lin-erals, CCF and Progressive Conservatives.

Liberals, who were thrown out last year after 19 years in office—
the last 11 of them in coalition with the Conservatives—have come up with both a new program and a new leader. Chosen for the task of revitatizing the party was former

British Columbia's Socialists are still a potent force although they too have changed leadership, bring-ing up 54-year-old Vancouver ing up 54-year-old Vancouver school principal Arnold Webster to replace Harold Winch.

And the Conservatives are still in the running—also under a new leader—having picked 34-year-old Nanaimo real estate dealer Deane Finlayson to take over from one-time coalition finance minister Herbert Anscomb.

Standing at dissolution of the last legislature was Social Credit 19 seats, CCF 18, Liberal 6, Progressive Conservative 2, Labor 1, and vacant 2.

Premier Bennett, a crafty remes bennett, a crarry poti-tical strategist, admits that the belief among a large section of the public that Social Credit is the early group which can form a maj-ority government "is the greatest single factor in favor of Social Credit"

Their campaign slogan of "Social-Credit Credit or choas" reflects that thought. A second slogan reflects another trump card the Socreds could. be holding-"Social Credit democracy by spreading fear in-stead of faith in the minds of the voters". Laing charged at a recent campaign rally in Victoria.

The Socreds are probably the best-heeled of any party. They plan on spending about $25,006. The Liberals will spend about$18.-600, the CCF $13,000, and the Tories—who say they are having a difficult time raising funds—about ficult time raising funds-about Undertone of a forthcoming fedcral election, now expected for August, is running clearly through this provincial campaign. The Social Credit hopes to achieve a decisive victory, thus virtually ensuring election of some federal MP's from British Columbia in the next federal vote. Other parties find themselves united in a fight to turn back what could be a rising flood of Social Credit strength on the west coast.

Major issue in the campaign is Social Credit's radical new school financing system—dubbed the Rol-ston formula after education minister Tilly Rolston, although it was really devised by finance minister Elnar Gunderson. The Socred record, labor-legislation, and the Bospital insurance service are also way, point on the air route from important issues.

> Opposition party speakers also remind their audiences that they asked Bennett to set aside the bill on the Rolston formula— the rock on which the Socred ship of state floandered—until after non-contro-versial legislation had been dealt with. Bennett rejected that request, insisting that a confidence vote be taken on the formula.

The alternative voting system which British Columbia used for the first time last year will again be employed. Under the system, the voters mark his ballot 1, 2, 3 and so in the order of his preference for the candidates. If the candi-date he voted first choice for is the low man on the first count, the candidate is eliminated and his vote is transferred to his second choice candidate. Probably nothing has angered new Liberal leader Laing more than this slogan, which seeks to develop the idea that the election in strictly a fight between Social Credit and the CCF, and in other words, between free enterprise and socialism.

For instance, in a riding where a Social Credit candidate is leading on the first count, he might not pick up many of the second choices of candidates who are eliminated. As a result, Liberal, CCF or Conservative candidates—who ever might be running second— could nose out the Socred by getting enough of the second choice ballots to win a majority
